

Selling an object to one's children

The first question of Fatwa no. 4153:

Q 1: Is it permissible for a man to sell some of his property to his children, given that some of them can afford it while others are penniless and cannot afford anything?

A: It is permissible for a man to sell some of his property to his children if they can afford it. He should deal with them as if they are strangers, and not prefer any of them over the others.
